

With STOCKMAR, children experience and shape the world through the artistic process in their own unique way. The creative interplay between imagination and external sensory perception helps them grow both in their creative abilities and capacity for imagination.

The inner calm that emerges during artistic activity serves as a healthy counterbalance to the often one-sided, performance-oriented demands placed on children, bringing balance to their development.

STOCKMAR product worlds

For over 100 years, the name STOCKMAR has stood for high-quality art products. Here, quality is understood and nurtured in a comprehensive way: through the careful selection of raw materials, exceptional craftsmanship, and excellent colour, painting, and modeling properties. STOCKMAR's commitment to quality also includes the ambition to open up artistic spaces that positively support individual development. The result are extraordinary products that encourage a rich artistic experience – whether at home, in kindergarten, at school, or in therapeutic settings.

Grasping the world

Children love shaping and modeling – through artistic creation, they make the world their own. STOCKMAR modeling beeswax is the ideal material for this purpose. It is versatile and clean to use. Initially firm, its consistency changes with the warmth of the hands, becoming soft and pliable to form any imaginable creation.

Creating with all senses

Working with STOCKMAR modeling beeswax is a multi-sensory experience: the active use of the hands, the bright, harmonious colours, and the delicate beeswax scent engage all the senses. The modeled figures retain their shape, colour, and shine and can always be reworked as needed. Thanks to its translucent quality, delicate works glow beautifully when held up to a light source. Both children and adults enjoy the calming atmosphere that modeling with beeswax can provide.

High-quality and effective

STOCKMAR modeling beeswax was developed in close collaboration with educators. This high-quality material holistically engages children's senses and opens up artistic possibilities. Colour has power – something Johann Wolfgang von Goethe recognized in his famous colour wheel, which serves as inspiration for the vibrant yet harmonious colour palette of all STOCKMAR products.
